How any of the books except Bowley's Elements of Statistics can be of any use to the Census staff is not clear. Items 2, 384 deal with subjects which the writers consider ought to be of interest to which the Society as it exists represents. Item No 1 would be useful for Ethnography and as there is a separate office for Ethnography the Census staff need not have anything to do with it. Items 687 deal with proverbs & customs of much use while Item 8 might contain much useful information about South Indian castes. It may also be stated that the previous Census reports of the various provinces contain much useful matter ethnically and they may more profitably be consulted. In these circumstances the Census staff may perhaps be asked to state for what particular purpose he wants these books.
